

RELATIONAL CHANGE: A CERTIFICATE IN COUPLES WORK

LED BY DR LYNDA OSBORNE & DR MARIE-ANNE CHIDIAC

Beginning March 2019

As human beings we are wired to emotionally attach. Establishing and maintaining that bond within a couple involves work and needs support which, in a more mobile society, may be less available. Working with couples often creates a potentially positive relational impact on individuals, families and communities. Adopting both a relational and systemic view of working with couples is essential and acknowledges the embeddedness of the couple within a family and larger community.

This programme of 4 modules (over 10 days) will provide you with the competence and confidence to provide couples counselling and psychotherapy.

A combination of relational, embodied, experiential and creative perspectives of couple work underpinned by theoretical understanding and clinical skills runs throughout the course.

The course is suitable for practitioners who wish to extend their work into or with couples, using relational principles – particularly for those trained as individual counsellors in Humanistic, Integrative, Person-Centred, Gestalt, TA, Process or Contemporary Analytic approaches.

You can expect to build confidence and competence as a couples practitioner including:

- Assessment and contracting
- Recognising interlocking dynamics
- Facilitating communication
- Working with sexuality/gender issues
- Conflict and conflict resolution
- Understanding attachment processes/developmental histories
- Consideration of the wider context
- Drawing on theoretical frameworks
- Developing a wide range of relevant skills
- Drawing on the support of the group

FULL COURSE OUTLINE:

Module One: March 1st, 2nd & 3rd 2019

Making a Start

Led by: Dr. Lynda Osborne

Assessing, identifying key issues and contracting is the focus of this module. We will consider the client in context, draw on a range of theoretical frameworks and practise key skills and interventions in couple work. We will also explore how individual, family and cultural histories underlie a couple's current experience. This will include scripts and the concept of 'unconscious fit'.

Module two: May 10th & 11th 2019

Attachment, separation and loss in couple work.

Led by: Dr. Marie-Anne Chidiac

This module will focus on attachment styles, their significance for couples' relationships and the implications for clinical work. When isolation and loss are potentially traumatising we will consider how best to support couples who experience these within their relationship or during separation.

Module Three: June 28th & 29th 2019

Presenting Problems and Underlying Difficulties

Led by: Dr. Lynda Osborne

We will focus on ways in which couples may present and recognising their fixed patterns and interlocking dynamics. How effectively a couple communicate and ways to facilitate emotional contact will be discussed and practised.

Module Four: September 27th, 28th & 29th 2019

Sexuality, Intimacy and Power

Led by: Dr. Lynda Osborne with a guest tutor.

This module will focus on sexuality and gender, power dynamics and conflict resolution.

The emphasis will be on a pragmatic and creative approach to working with couples within a relational frame. As well as practical processes and skills, participants will also be offered the opportunity to explore more embodied and experiential ways of intervening.

Certificate/Diploma Requirements

To obtain the certificate, practitioners must be on the BACP Register of Counsellors, UKCP register of psychotherapeutic counsellors or psychotherapists or the BPC register of counselling psychologists or clinical psychologists.

One piece of written work (2000 words) is required for the certificate.

There may be potential to continue the programme to diploma level, through the completion of two practicum days and supervised practice in couples work.
